Reflection
for the 25th Sunday in Ordinary Time

This Sunday's readings speak powerfully about how we use the gifts entrusted to us—material blessings, responsibility, and influence—and how our choices reflect our faith and our trust in God.

From Amos, we are reminded that exploiting others for personal gain is not unnoticed by God. A just and compassionate heart sees beyond profit and seeks the dignity and well-being of the most vulnerable.

St. Paul encourages us to lift up prayers for all—especially those in authority—so that our lives may be lived in peace and integrity. True freedom flourishes when we place our trust in God and act with sincerity, not for human praise.

Finally, Jesus' parable invites us to consider the wisdom behind our stewardship. It challenges us: are we faithful in small things? Do we invest in relationships and acts of kindness that endure beyond worldly wealth? Honesty and faithfulness in daily life prepare us for deeper gifts from God.

Today, we are called to live with integrity in our dealings, to honor every person made in God's image, and to invest our time and resources in what truly endures. Let us be people who serve God, not mammon, and who build enduring bonds of love, solidarity, and faith—grounded in humility and grace.

May our community flourish when each of us becomes a trustworthy steward of God's gifts in service to His kingdom.
